small change, one story at a time.

The Pound Project is an independent publisher based in the UK. Established in Birmingham by writer JP Watson, the company campaigns to put the value of the arts first. This is the 17th title in the movement. More information about the company's ethos, products and services can be found at www.poundproject.co.uk.

Laura Callaghan is an Irish Illustrator living in Belfast. Her work is largely hand-painted using watercolour and gouache. Part fashion illustration, part satire, she creates images that are ostensibly bright and beautiful but that cultivate a sense of unease and humour. This book is her first longer form comic.

This publication and The Pound Project rely on those who pledge to the cause through crowdfunding. We only print what we sell, so this book only exists because of the strong support from everyone who backed the project.

The publisher thanks Laura Callaghan for the beautiful hand-painted images in this comic book and for the support making the transition to full colour. Love and respect to HVW, SJT and IBW for taking the journey with us.
