BLONDE

NOVEMBER 11TH 1989
CENTURY HOUSE, LONDON

Uncomfortable.

Sir, why am I
in the bin? I was going to type up my debrief on Monday.

Given the scale
of recent events,
I need to hear it
directly from you,
without delay.

Well, he's not moving much at all any more. On Wednesday, BER-1 messaged that BER-2 was incommunicado.

Last night, the Jerries fished Gascoine's body out of the Spree.

You mean he was killed on our side? In West Berlin?

Yes. BER-1's sources point to Yuri Bakhtin, a known KGB officer. Bakhtin was in Berlin, but left the day after BER-2's death, returning to Moscow.

What do you need me for? Surely you don't want me to chase him down in Moscow?

No point. Bakhtin never arrived.

SPYGLASS claimed it contained the name and position of every officer in Berlin.

Every officer. Yanks, Frogs, us, the Soviets, even some Fins and Italians.

That's... oh, bloody hell.

But what do you want me to do? I've never even been to Berlin.

Berlin is a powder keg. Bloody Gorbachev and his glasnost nonsense has us all running around like blue-arsed flies.

Recent CX suggests the wall won't last much longer. David thinks it might even fall before Christmas.

David, sir?

David Perceval, our BER-1. One of half a dozen confirmed Allied officers in the city, twice as many suspected.

We assume there are at least triple that number of KGB.

I suppose it shouldn't surprise me that he went straight to the bloody CIA.

Like C said, sir,
Perceval had gone native. I think all he cared about was his life and connections in Berlin.

I was merely an irritant.

And yet he never once messed us
to complain.

Instead, he declared
you to the Yanks. May as well have broadcast
it from the top of the Brandenburg Gate.

I don't think it was all that bad, sir.

Never mind.
Carry on.

This is all the Attaché gets? Cosy isn't the word.

If you wanted an Embassy, you should have gone straight to the GDR. Not that they're much use for anything, over there.

I'll need Gascoine's address here in Berlin, and his passport.

The police have his passport. He was carrying it.

Don't you have a copy?

Oh, uh... No, of course not.

Don't worry, the Home Office called me yesterday with the number.

I see. Can you write it out for me?

And that's it? The only contact you made?

At that time, yes. I needed to get a handle on the city and the social scene before I started making moves.

Did you forget the urgency of this mission?

With respect, sir, it's not the Sixties any more. The theatre has changed. People suspect all too quickly these days.

Besides, I knew I'd be in Berlin longer than Perceval expected. He'd all but given me the method himself.

You bloody Gallic buffoon, if I was going to kill you I'd have done it by now.

BER-2 was killed because of something he was carrying. I can't tell you what.

No, no. I believe he was killed because of what he knew.

He was an Ice Man. And he was going to blow the whistle.

What the hell is an Ice Man?

Assassins. Spies for hire. Mercenaries. They are infamous on both sides of the Iron Curtain.

You're having me on.

I believe your man was one of them, but wanted out. He was killed to stop him talking.

But you do not share this theory.

I'd never even heard it before now.

The item BER-2 was carrying was a document. Very sensitive.

What was on it?

I can't tell you.

But believe me, it's valuable. If the other side gets it... well, it would be bad news for us all.

That's why you were talking to the pedlar.

There's a good chance it will float on the black market, yes.

Ice Men? I've never heard anything so ridiculous.

That's what I thought, sir.

A network of officers across Europe, for hire as assassins? Something like that could never be kept quiet.

You said "thought". Did you change your mind?

Yes.

In fact, I now believe BER-1 was the ringleader.

OCTOBER 31st 1989, CHECKPOINT CHARLIE

Was ist der Grund für ihren Besuch, Fräulein Kupetski?

Ich habe Familie dort leben.

Your German is very bad. Where are you from?

England, but my parents were born in Leningrad. I'm visiting my grandparents today.

You should have applied for a visitor's permit.

I didn't even know I'd be here until two days ago. My company sent me over for a meeting.

I saw one with my own eyes this morning, on the other side of Charlie.

You went over as well?

What the hell were you thinking?!

That it was best you didn't know. Deniability, and all that.

You bloody fool! You could have been shot!

So could you!

Anyway, untwist your knickers. I just had to connect with a source. I won't need to go over again.

Don't make me regret it.

Why do we care if he's arrested,
anyway?

Surely he can't tell them anything about us they don't already know.

Probably not.
But remember,
SPYGLASS wrote that list. So if the Soviets do get their hands on it...

...it won't matter, because if we have him,
we've all got the same intel.

Precisely.

We spent the next three days planning everything out.

Perceval contacted SPYGLASS and sorted IDs, while I arranged things with Merkel.

Perceval would wait for us in a safe house on the West. I'd use Merkel as a supply point in the East.

Hold on. You suspected BER-1 of running an assassin ring, but you let him send you over the Wall alone?

I suspect it now, sir. At the time, I had no idea.

Besides, it was the right call. Everyone in Berlin knew his credentials. They couldn't stop him crossing, but his presence would draw unwanted attention.

Good thing you arranged a safe house with Merkel.

Why didn't you just use the tunnel to start with?

Perceval said most of them had been blown years ago, so you'd stopped using them.

It was very much a last resort, but I'm glad I took it. Otherwise I wouldn't have seen the body.

It was Bakhtin, I'm sure of it. I recognised him from the file, and the body was relatively fresh.

Did you confront BER-1?

No, I went home to lay low and figure out what was going on.

But that didn't work out too well, either.

Who else
would have known about the run? Who else would have killed Bakhtin?

So you believe the pictures were genuine?

Of Perceval
and Yerchenko
together? Yes.
Why would Pierre
fake them?

We'll come to that later.

First, tell me... how did Perceval take SPYGLASS'
death?

You're sure it was Bakhtin?

Absolutely. And Perceval was giving him a package.

The DGSE had obviously been keeping tabs on our men for some time.

And where are the pictures now?

I burned them.

...You did what?!

Not straight away. But when Perceval was killed, I couldn't risk the police finding them. Embarrassing for all of us.

You
bloody fool, Broughton.

you bloody,
bloody
fool.

Sir? I don't understand.
Perceval's dead,
what does it matter?

But
his legacy lives on.

Oh, just... go on,
finish. Then I'll explain.

There isn't
much more to tell.
This was all on the 6th. I laid low for the next two days, trying to shake out contacts,
but no luck.

Merkel had vanished, Pierre
was dead, Kurzfeld
obviously thought I was incompetent...
I was distinctly
low on friends.

The truth,
please, Lorraine.

Oh, Christ...

I'm sorry,
sir. I'm so sorry.

I just...
I froze, there was nothing
I could do...

Now we're getting somewhere.

Just calm down, and tell us everything.

I went straight to the Attaché's office and messaged you, before calling the police.

And you never found the list.

No, sir. Sorry, sir.

But like Perceval said, does it matter now? The Cold War is over.

Is that what you think?

It's what people are saying.

You should know better than to listen to the people, Broughton.

Berlin is reunited. Germany may follow, and maybe the entire Iron Curtain will fall. But Russia will always be Russia.

But then why would BER-2 tell him about the list in the first place? BER-1 knew what he was carrying, remember.

Well, I... I don't know.

But, sir, it all fits!

Perceval never wanted me in Berlin. He tried to get rid of me at every turn.

He didn't seem particularly bothered about the list. I don't think he wanted it found.

Perceval also knew the exfil route. So he told Yerchenko to kill SPYGLASS before he could spill the beans.

And Bakhtin killed BER-2 on Perceval's orders, then Perceval silenced him, dumped him in the sewers, and fed us that rubbish about a train to Moscow.

There is no list.

There never was.

I don't understand.

Perceval pulled a fast one, on all of us.

Think, Lorraine. Who knew about the list?

BER-1, BER-2, me, you, C...

But all any of us have is Perceval's word for it. BER-2 didn't log anything with us directly.

Oh! And SPYGLASS, of course.

Did he say anything to you about the list?

No, there wasn't time...

...before he was killed.

And David didn't tell me about it till after Gascoine was found dead.

So the only two men who could confirm the list's existence were both dead.

But why lie? It doesn't make sense.

It makes perfect sense.

Perceval killed BER-2, and used Bakhtin as a scapegoat. On that much, I agree with you.

But he needed a cover story.

The KGB doesn't go around shooting British officers for fun. The game was never that blatant, not even in the glory days.

A close-up, high-contrast black and white illustration of a man's face. He is wearing thick-rimmed glasses and has a serious expression. His hand is partially visible near his chin.

So he fabricated the list, to distract us. And it worked.

It was quite brilliant, really. Worthy of an officer of his calibre.

A black and white illustration of a man in a suit and tie, looking down with a somber expression. The lighting is dramatic, with strong shadows.

I don't care how you get it, who you upset, or where it takes you. Bring it home.

A black and white illustration showing two men in suits. The man on the left is in profile, resting his chin on his hand. The man on the right is facing forward, looking slightly to the side.

Hitler said, "The greater the lie, the more inclined people are to believe it."

Goebbels, actually, but the principle is sound.

A black and white illustration of a woman's face, looking directly at the viewer with a serious, questioning expression. Her hair is dark and styled in a short, wavy bob.

Where's the motive? Surely even Perceval wouldn't kill a fellow officer because they didn't get along.

Think,
Lorraine,
think!

Perceval
killed BER-2
and fed us a line. We sent you in, and he told you the same story.

Sent you on a wild goose
chase.

But then SPYGLASS wanted
out. Perceval messaged that to us, of course. Not the sort of thing
he could go silent on.

But he had to silence
SPYGLASS, before
we could question
him about the list.

Remember
I asked afterwards if you were the real target?

Yes, but I still believe it was SPYGLASS.

In fact, I believe you're both right. There were two targets.
SPYGLASS...

...and
you.

That's
absurd...!

More absurd
than Perceval
playing fixer to a ring of assassins?

So he failed
to eliminate you,
but no matter. After that, I think he believed he was safe.

Until the Frog said
he had information
for you.

...A top secret recipe
of great interest
to your company,
I am sure.

And you told Perceval.

Now hang on a moment! You can't think I killed Perceval!

Did
you?

No! For God's sake!

He was a misogynistic,
bullying prick,
but I didn't want him dead!

Someone
did.

Did you get a good look at his killer?

No... well, he did look sort of familiar, but I couldn't place him. Maybe from an old case file. I can check, if you like.

I've saved you the trouble. Take a look at these.

This one... he looks familiar. I'm not sure, I...

oh, god.

The Pole, in the bar. The one who chatted me up. It was him!

Aleksander Bremovych. Born 1952, Kraków, to Russian immigrant parents. Recruited '69, quickly became one of the KGB's top runners.

He was involved with that bloody mess in Czechoslovakia in '75, not to mention a few Frog doubles over the years.

Bremovych flew into Berlin on the 29th.

So he was KGB. That doesn't mean he wasn't an Ice Man.

Doesn't this line-up strike you as odd? Bremovych, Yerchenko, Bakhtin?

I don't follow.

Your fabled Ice Men are supposedly an international outfit. But all three of these men are KGB.

A remarkable coincidence, wouldn't you say?

Berlin is crawling with KGB, everyone knows that.

And Frogs, Yanks, Poles, Eyeties, even us.

You really think Russians are the only people willing to kill for money?

This is all circumstantial. There's no proof, and no motive.

Perceval killed BER-2, then SPYGLASS and Pierre... and then the KGB killed him? It doesn't make any sense!

Why?

Langley intercepted this on the 5th, the day after SPYGLASS was killed.

It's from Serlet, to Paris. He states his belief that there's a double agent working in Berlin.

A British double.

That's... that's why you asked if Pierre mentioned doubles?

You thought he meant a double in the DGSE. In fact, he was talking about Perceval.

Perceval isn't mentioned by name.

The French know we read their mail, they're not going to give us the golden egg without cutting a deal first.

And if the CIA intercepted it, you can be sure the KGB did too.

It's been known for some time that Bremovych was running a British double, codename STACHEL. We just didn't know who it was.

Those photos Serlet showed you weren't evidence of Perceval's involvement with assassins.

They were proof he was STACHEL.

So, three days after BER-2 is killed, Bremovych
arrives in Berlin.
Perhaps Perceval
wanted to defect.

And
why?

Communism's
collapsing. Moscow knows the Wall coming down is just the start. From here on it's going to snowball like crazy.

Defection's always been a good life. Apartment in Moscow, enough
cash to retire, KGB security... if you make it over the Curtain, you're good as made.

But if the Kremlin collapses, what then? The KGB's power wanes.
All those state-
guaranteed roubles
are gone.

Defection
is no longer appealing.

But if Perceval came back and flipped
for you, instead...

BER-2 was
on to Perceval all right. He'd blown him as a double.

But if SPYGLASS talked, we'd find out the list didn't exist. Paris would confirm our suspicions.

Perceval
was cleaning up after himself.

And so was Bremovych. It was just a question of which man finished
the job first.

We asked Perceval to come home several times, you know. Every time he resisted,
insisting he wanted
to stay in Berlin.

Because of Thatcher? Or was that a smokescreen?

There was no point. To any of it. I might as well have stayed at bloody home.

On the contrary, your presence forced Perceval's hand.

We're burying this one, Lorraine.

Your mission never took place. This conversation, and the one Emmett and I are about to have with C, never happened.

Take some leave. Come back bright and fresh in the New Year.

"I'm sorry, sir."

GANTZSTRASSE

"It's still hard to believe. Perceval was a boulder, and frankly, I was glad to leave him in Berlin so I didn't have to deal with him."

"But I never imagined..."

"I mean, really. STACHEL? Perceval?"

"You'll have to promote her, Waddel. A sweetener, to keep her quiet."

I suspected as soon as you arrived in Berlin, of course. Why else would you come so quickly, when you knew as well as I that the list didn't exist?

Killing the Frog was just icing on the cake.

That was you, wasn't it?

Da.

"Where is she? Still on leave?"

"Yes, sir. I believe she's staying with family, in Somerset."

Lies, secrets,
more lies... it's what we live
for, I suppose.

But what does
it matter now?
The Wall is coming down. Our secrets are worthless.

Don't worry,
old boy. I won't tell if you won't.

Mum's the word, eh?

"Well, here goes. Let's see if the Minister believes a single word of it."
